Manmohan Singh: A Visionary Prime Minister Who Reshaped Modern India

Few leaders in independent India have left as deep and enduring an impact on the country's economy, governance, and global standing as Dr. Manmohan Singh. Revered for his honesty, intellectual depth, and calm leadership, Dr. Singh is widely regarded as one of India's greatest visionary Prime Ministers. Unlike many politicians who relied on charismatic speeches or mass mobilization, he led with ideas, economic expertise, and quiet determination. His leadership demonstrated that transformational governance does not always require loud rhetoric; it can emerge through thoughtful policies, institutional reform, and long-term planning.

“Born on September 26, 1932, in Gah (now in Pakistan), Manmohan Singh experienced the trauma of Partition as a young boy. Despite immense hardships, he excelled academically, studying at Panjab University before earning advanced degrees from the University of Cambridge and the University of Oxford. His exceptional academic record established him as one of India's finest economists long before he entered politics.”

“Throughout his career, Dr. Singh held several prestigious positions, including Chief Economic Adviser, Governor of the Reserve Bank of India, Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission, and Finance Minister. Each role strengthened his understanding of India's economic challenges and prepared him to guide the nation through periods of profound change.”

“His most celebrated contribution before becoming Prime Minister came in 1991, when India faced one of the worst economic crises in its history. Foreign exchange reserves had dwindled to the point where the country could barely finance a few weeks of imports. Inflation was rising, industrial growth had slowed, and international confidence in India's economy had weakened significantly.”

“As Finance Minister under Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao, Dr. Manmohan Singh introduced a bold package of economic reforms that fundamentally transformed India's development trajectory. These reforms dismantled the restrictive 'License Raj,' reduced unnecessary government controls, encouraged private enterprise, welcomed foreign investment, simplified industrial licensing, and integrated India more closely with the global economy.”

“At the time, these decisions attracted criticism from several quarters. Many feared that liberalization would harm domestic industries or increase inequality. However, Dr. Singh remained committed to the belief that sustainable economic growth required structural reforms rather than short-term political calculations. His famous statement in Parliament, quoting Victor Hugo—'No power on earth can stop an idea whose time has come'—captured his conviction that India needed a new economic direction.”

“The reforms initiated in 1991 laid the foundation for India's emergence as one of the world's fastest-growing major economies. The expansion of information technology, telecommunications, financial services, manufacturing, and entrepreneurship over the following decades owed much to the policy framework established during this period. Millions of Indians benefited from greater employment opportunities, higher incomes, improved infrastructure, and increased access to global markets.”

“When Dr. Manmohan Singh became India's Prime Minister in 2004, many observers questioned whether a soft-spoken economist without a mass political base could effectively lead the world's largest democracy. Over the next ten years, however, he demonstrated that intellectual leadership and institutional governance could coexist with democratic politics.”

“His vision extended beyond economic growth alone. He believed that development should be inclusive, combining market reforms with social welfare initiatives that expanded opportunities for disadvantaged communities. This balanced approach sought to ensure that economic progress translated into improvements in education, healthcare, rural employment, and financial inclusion.”

“Dr. Singh's tenure also reflected his deep commitment to democratic institutions, constitutional values, and consensus-building. Rather than personalizing power, he often emphasized collective decision-making within the Cabinet and respected the autonomy of key institutions. His calm demeanor, integrity, and reluctance to engage in political confrontation distinguished him from many contemporary leaders around the world.”

“For millions of Indians, Manmohan Singh symbolizes integrity in public life. Despite occupying some of the nation's highest offices for decades, he maintained a reputation for personal honesty, humility, and intellectual rigor. Even political opponents frequently acknowledged his integrity and scholarly excellence.”

“His legacy illustrates that visionary leadership is not measured solely by electoral victories or political popularity but by the lasting institutions, policies, and opportunities created for future generations. The India that emerged as a globally respected economic power in the twenty-first century bears the unmistakable imprint of Dr. Manmohan Singh's vision, making him one of the most influential Prime Ministers in the country's modern history.”

“2. One of the defining characteristics of Dr. Manmohan Singh's leadership was his unwavering belief that economic growth should be accompanied by social justice. While he firmly supported market-oriented reforms and private sector participation, he also believed that the benefits of development should reach the poorest sections of society. This balanced philosophy shaped many of the landmark welfare initiatives introduced during his tenure as Prime Minister from 2004 to 2014.”

“His government launched several rights-based legislations that significantly changed the relationship between the state and its citizens. Among the most notable was the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MGNREGA), which provided a legal guarantee of wage employment to rural households. The programme helped millions of families during periods of economic distress, reduced seasonal migration, strengthened rural purchasing power, and created durable community assets in villages. Though the scheme faced criticism regarding implementation in some regions, it remains one of the world's largest public employment programmes.”

“Another transformative initiative was the Right to Information (RTI) Act, enacted in 2005. The legislation empowered ordinary citizens to seek information from government departments, thereby increasing transparency and accountability in public administration. The RTI Act became a powerful democratic tool that enabled journalists, activists, researchers, and common citizens to expose corruption, monitor public expenditure, and strengthen participatory governance. It fundamentally changed the culture of governance by making government institutions more answerable to the people.”

“Dr. Singh's government also enacted the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act, which recognized elementary education as a fundamental right. Significant investments were made in expanding schools, recruiting teachers, improving educational infrastructure, and enhancing access for disadvantaged communities. Although challenges remained in learning outcomes and quality of education, the policy marked a historic step toward universal elementary education in India.”

“Healthcare also received increased attention. The National Rural Health Mission strengthened primary healthcare services, improved maternal and child health, expanded immunization programmes, and upgraded health infrastructure in rural and underserved regions. Infant mortality rates and maternal mortality rates showed gradual improvement during this period, reflecting the growing emphasis on public health.”

“Dr. Manmohan Singh also recognized the importance of financial inclusion. His government expanded banking services into rural India, encouraged financial literacy, and promoted access to formal credit for farmers, women, and small entrepreneurs. These efforts laid the groundwork for broader financial inclusion initiatives in subsequent years.”

“Infrastructure development accelerated considerably during his tenure. Massive investments were made in highways, airports, ports, railways, urban transport systems, telecommunications, and electricity generation. India's telecom revolution gathered remarkable momentum, with mobile connectivity expanding rapidly across urban and rural areas. Affordable communication transformed education, commerce, banking, governance, and everyday life for hundreds of millions of Indians.”

“India's information technology and services sectors also flourished during this period. The country emerged as a global leader in software development, information technology services, business process outsourcing, and knowledge-based industries. Foreign investors increasingly viewed India as a stable destination for investment due to its democratic institutions, skilled workforce, and expanding domestic market.”

“During the global financial crisis of 2008, Dr. Manmohan Singh's economic expertise proved especially valuable. While many advanced economies experienced severe recessions, banking failures, and prolonged economic contractions, India's financial system remained relatively stable. The government adopted carefully calibrated fiscal and monetary measures to sustain growth and protect employment. Although India's growth rate slowed temporarily, the economy recovered faster than many other major nations, earning international recognition for its resilience.”

“Dr. Singh's foreign policy also elevated India's international stature. His government strengthened strategic partnerships with the United States, the European Union, Japan, ASEAN countries, and several African nations while maintaining productive relationships with Russia and other global partners. India expanded its diplomatic engagement across multiple regions, reflecting its growing economic and geopolitical importance.”

“One of the most significant achievements of his tenure was the India–United States Civil Nuclear Agreement. The agreement ended decades of nuclear isolation, opened opportunities for international civilian nuclear cooperation, and symbolized India's emergence as a responsible global nuclear power. Despite intense political opposition and considerable domestic controversy, Dr. Singh demonstrated remarkable determination in pursuing what he believed to be a long-term national interest. His willingness to risk the stability of his government for this agreement reflected his conviction that visionary leadership sometimes requires difficult political choices.”

“Throughout his years in office, Dr. Manmohan Singh remained personally modest and intellectually disciplined. He rarely responded to political attacks with harsh rhetoric and consistently maintained dignity in public discourse. His calm demeanor, scholarly approach, and emphasis on evidence-based policymaking earned him respect from economists, diplomats, academics, and world leaders. While debates continue regarding certain policy decisions and administrative challenges during his tenure, his contribution to India's economic modernization, democratic institutions, and global standing remains one of the most significant chapters in the history of independent India.”

“3. Dr. Manmohan Singh's tenure as Prime Minister was not without challenges and criticism. Like every democratic leader, he governed in a complex political environment marked by coalition politics, global economic uncertainties, and rising public expectations. Several corruption allegations against members of his government, including the 2G spectrum allocation case, the Commonwealth Games controversy, and the coal block allocation issue, dominated political discourse during his second term. Although investigations and judicial proceedings led to different legal outcomes over time, these controversies significantly affected the public perception of his government. Critics argued that he did not act decisively enough against those accused, while his supporters maintained that his personal integrity remained unquestioned throughout his public life.”

“One of the recurring criticisms against Dr. Singh was that he was 'too soft' in political leadership. Opponents often described him as a silent Prime Minister who allowed others within the political establishment to dominate decision-making. However, many scholars and former civil servants have offered a different interpretation. They argue that his leadership style was based on consensus, institutional processes, and constitutional propriety rather than confrontation or political theatrics. He believed that strong institutions, not strong personalities alone, should guide a democracy.”

“Despite criticism, India's economic performance during much of his tenure remained impressive. Between 2004 and 2011, India experienced some of the highest economic growth rates in its post-independence history. Rising foreign exchange reserves, increasing exports, expanding infrastructure, rapid growth in information technology, and a growing middle class reflected the confidence of domestic and international investors. Millions of Indians moved out of poverty during this period, and India's influence in global economic forums increased substantially.”

“Dr. Singh also played a crucial role in enhancing India's reputation as a responsible global power. He consistently advocated peaceful international relations, multi-lateral cooperation, and dialogue over conflict. Under his leadership, India became a more influential participant in the G20, BRICS, East Asia Summit, and other international forums. His calm diplomacy earned respect from world leaders, economists, and international institutions. Unlike many political leaders who sought headlines through aggressive rhetoric, Dr. Singh preferred quiet diplomacy backed by credibility and economic strength.”

“His personal life further strengthened his public image. In an era when political corruption often dominated headlines, Dr. Manmohan Singh remained widely respected for his honesty, simplicity, and ethical conduct. He never cultivated a personality cult around himself. He lived modestly, avoided unnecessary political drama, and focused on policy discussions rather than personal publicity. Even his political opponents frequently acknowledged his integrity and academic brilliance, distinguishing criticism of his government from criticism of his character.”

“Another remarkable aspect of his leadership was his faith in knowledge and expertise. As an economist, he encouraged evidence-based policymaking and valued the advice of experts, administrators, scientists, and academics. His government promoted higher education, scientific research, technological innovation, and economic modernization as essential pillars of India's future. He believed that investment in human capital was as important as investment in physical infrastructure.”

“Dr. Singh's contribution to India's economic transformation cannot be understood only through statistics. His greatest achievement was creating confidence in India's long-term potential. The liberalization process that he initiated as Finance Minister in 1991 and expanded through subsequent policy reforms helped transform India from a relatively closed economy into one of the world's fastest-growing emerging markets. Today, India's strong services sector, globally competitive information technology industry, expanding startup ecosystem, growing foreign investment, and increasing international economic influence all have roots in the reforms he championed.”

“Historians often observe that visionary leaders are not always fully appreciated during their own time. Their contributions become clearer when viewed over several decades. Dr. Manmohan Singh belongs to that category of leaders whose ideas continue to shape national policy long after they leave office. Many economic reforms introduced by successive governments, regardless of political ideology, have built upon the institutional foundations established during his career.”

“His legacy therefore extends beyond electoral politics. It is reflected in stronger economic institutions, greater global integration, expanded educational opportunities, improved transparency through the Right to Information Act, wider financial inclusion, and a governance philosophy that balanced economic growth with social welfare. While historians will continue to debate the successes and shortcomings of his administration, few would deny that Dr. Manmohan Singh fundamentally altered the direction of India's economic and developmental journey. His vision, integrity, intellectual leadership, and unwavering commitment to democratic values ensure that he will remain one of the most influential Prime Ministers in the history of modern India.”

“4. The life and legacy of Dr. Manmohan Singh demonstrate that true leadership is measured not by loud speeches or political spectacle, but by the lasting impact of ideas, policies, and institutions. As an economist, reformer, and Prime Minister, he played a pivotal role in transforming India's economic landscape and positioning the country as a respected global power. His commitment to liberalization, inclusive growth, education, transparency, and democratic governance continues to influence public policy even today.”

“Although his tenure witnessed political challenges and controversies, his personal integrity, humility, and dedication to public service remained largely unquestioned. He believed that economic development should empower ordinary citizens, reduce poverty, create opportunities, and strengthen democratic institutions. His leadership reflected patience, intellectual rigor, and an unwavering faith in constitutional values rather than political populism.”

“History often judges leaders by the long-term consequences of their decisions rather than the political debates of their own time. From the landmark economic reforms of 1991 to the transformative policies implemented during his decade as Prime Minister, Dr. Manmohan Singh's contributions have left an indelible mark on India's development. The growth of India's economy, the expansion of its global influence, and the strengthening of many democratic institutions bear testimony to his far-sighted vision.”

“Dr. Manmohan Singh will be remembered as a statesman who combined scholarship with statesmanship, humility with determination, and economic wisdom with social responsibility. His journey from a small village to the highest office in the world's largest democracy remains an inspiring example of how knowledge, honesty, and perseverance can shape the destiny of a nation. His legacy will continue to inspire economists, policymakers, students, and future generations who aspire to build a stronger, more inclusive, and more prosperous India.

The youth Are The Charioteers Of Progress World Youth Day 12th August

Youth can change the future of India" Swami Vivekananda The future of one nationIt depends on the youth of the country. As Swami Vivekananda said, give me a hundred strong youth and I will change the face of this country. In the current modern society, as we celebrate the International Youth Year, the role of youth in politics has gained importance. The time has come for today's youth to become not just voters but also the rulers of tomorrow."The official theme of International Youth Day 2026 is Different contexts, common aspirations The United Nations has announced this theme. The main objectives of the theme are.Different living conditionsYoung people around the world live in diverse geographic regions, economic resources, cultures, and social backgrounds. Young people in underdeveloped landlocked and small island developing states face additional challenges.Common aspirations"Despite their different living conditions, the goals and aspirations of every young person in the world are the same. A life of dignity, quality education, good employment opportunities, participation in decision-making, a bright future providingYouth is patriotic" Youth is the future of the country. The progress of the country depends on the youth. It is a fact that there is no power on this planet greater than the power of youth. Youth plays a vital role in the development and progress of the country.The youth are the backbone of the country. The youth, who play a key role in the development of the country, lack skills. The youth, who are preparing to hunt for employment with millions of hopes, are facing severe disappointment and despair. It is regrettable that the ILO, in its latest report, has revealed that jobless growth is a proof of the weakness of the youth power in the country.Decades of planned progress, with rising unemployment, have made significant progress in the economy and are enjoying a prosperous life Despite being a system, the central government has been successful in eradicating the increasing unemployment in the country. The industrial policy, investment policy, and economic policy implemented in the country have led to jobless development, resulting in increased unemployment. Unemployment among the youth in the country, which was 5.7 percent in 2000, has increased to 12.1 percent by 2022. It is unfortunate that 83 percent of the youth are unemployed and in the working class Youth population to decrease in southern states On the other hand a recent international report has said that the percentage of youth in the population of the southern states of the country will decrease in the coming days. There are indications that the demand in the labor market will increase in the southern states, which are achieving better economic development with educated youth. The International Labor Federation and the Institute of Human Development jointly report that the availability of young labor force in favor of market demand is not in line with the demand.This was revealed in the recently released report "India Employment Report 2024" in a survey conducted by the government.Telangana B unemploymentUnemployment is increasing in Telangana, which was formed with the sole purpose of recruiting water and duties, due to the government's neglect of recruitment.asotoy 15-29The report said that despite the fact that the educated youth aged 77.7 are not getting suitable jobs, many youth are out of employment. asomo 15-292 30 No Young women 18 percent of young people are unemployed"Revealed to be fading.Increased unemployment rate The unemployment rate among the youth in the state has increased from 14.19 percent to 21.71 percent. By 2036, the state's share in the population was 20.2 percent, while the country's share was 2.3 percent. Improvement in male employment Telangana, which was ranked 11th in male employment in 2005, rose to 2nd place by 2022.Women's employment has fallen from 4th to 7th place in the index.Number of youth staying away from employment, education and trainingIt will increase. If it was 17.9 percent in 2005It has now increased to 27.54 percent."Skills are lowComputer skills are lacking among the youth. They do not understand basic concepts."Working and studying is a natural process in developed countries, where students acquire new skills and earn job qualifications after completing their courses. In India, the skills to stand on their own feet are not a problem for our students. 1.2 million graduates are produced every year. The report says that only a third of them have job qualifications. Sector-wise needs plans and assessment of employment opportunities In the country, sector-wise plans should be prepared to assess the needs of the country in the next 30 years, 'employment opportunities' should be assessed and education, vocational education and 'employment-related courses' should be reformed accordingly Mechanism"Establishment of development centers should lay a solid foundation for artificial intelligence, robotics, virtual and data science technology courses. A strategic plan should be prepared in accordance with market needs. Nature conservation, agriculture and allied sectors should be developed. Natural organic farming methods should be expanded. The government should give priority to the modernization of rural handicrafts. New curricula should be introduced.

Skill development departments should be established in educational institutions. The curriculum should be prepared in a way that identifies the interest of students and allows them to study the course of their choice. Teaching, learning and research processes should be strengthened. Steps should be taken to overcome the short age of teaching staff in universities. The government should increase investment in the creation of infrastructure for education and medical sectors that contribute to human resource development. Educational programs that develop new skills among the youth and unlock employment opportunities anywhere in the world The government must take action.Youth should enter politics "Criticizing politics as rotten and staying away from it will never change the system. Just as the youth of that time fought and sacrificed their lives to drive the British out of the country, the youth of today should work at the same level to end the legacy of corruption and caste politics that is plaguing the country today. The youth believe that politics is not just for positions but is a great platform for social service."Must prove." When the new ideas of the youth, technology, and decisiveness are combined with the experience of the older generation, the country moves forward unhindered. On the occasion of the International Youth Year, we should all come to the same decision. Youth is not just a vote bank. Only when the youth step into the civic house and legislatures that run the country, true democracy will gain meaning. The construction of a new India is possible. If the youth awakens, the country will win. If the youth rules, the future will shine. Youth is the future of the country is not a slogan, but the youth should be the charioteers of progress.

Journalism will survive only if it is impartial Journalism should not become a pamphlet for political parties Only when we become the voice for the voiceless and ask questions, will journalism live forever in the hearts of the people - Das Mathangi, Chief Editor

Bureau Chief warangal August 11 : There is no difference between small and big when it comes to impartial journalism. The value of a newspaper is determined by the honest news it publishes, said Das Mathangi, Chief Editor of Akshita National Telugu Newspaper. The meeting of journalists from the united Warangal districts of Akshita National Daily was held at the Community Resource Center in Karimabad under the chairmanship of Dr. Paladugula Suresh, Bureau Chief of united Warangal districts. Speaking as the chief guest, Das Mathangi said that journalism is on its deathbed and it is the responsibility of the press and real journalists to protect it. "He said that for true journalism to survive, it must stand on the side of the people, take a social perspective, stay away from supporting politics, and present facts to the people impartially. Only then can journalism survive in society. Journalism should not turn into a pamphlet," he said. To protect the values of journalism, a journalist should show good as good and bad as bad. News that comes in WhatsApp and other groups should not be published as news. A matter should be thoroughly examined before it is published. Without unnecessary length, journalists should carefully verify the necessary facts and collect news. If the journalist edits and sends the news after verifying it, there will be no problems at the desk and the news content will be published clearly. He told journalists that newspapers and journalism should not be discredited just to please someone. Journalists should write news im-partially and bring the problems people face in society to the attention of the government, and work to get them resolved. If we come to know about the cries of those who are suffering from injustice, journalism should make an effort to inform the concerned department officials so that they get justice, he reminded. "Dr. Tirunahari Seshu, Professor at Kakatiya University and Political Analyst* said that journalism should not bow down to the selfish interests of a few people. It should present a problem as it is and work to become the voice of ordinary people who have no voice and to solve their problems. In these times when political parties are setting up media outlets to suit themselves, he said the work being done by Akshita National Daily journalists and its editor by exposing public problems with impartial journalism and opening the eyes of governments is very useful for social change. Telugu Stars Find a New Revenue Source in Multiplex Business

The opening created a lot of excitement among fans. Thousands of people gathered at Inorbit Mall to see their favourite star.

The Telugu film industry is seeing a new trend among star heroes. Many popular actors are now investing in multiplex businesses. Instead of putting all their money into real estate or other businesses, stars are showing interest in businesses connected to cinema.

The latest example is Allu Arjun. The Allu family and Asian Cinemas have jointly launched the AAA Cinemas multiplex in Visakhapatnam. The multiplex has eight screens and was officially opened recently. Allu Arjun was in Mumbai for the shooting of his upcoming film, but he travelled to Vizag in a special flight to attend the launch event.

The opening created a lot of excitement among fans. Thousands of people gathered at Inorbit Mall to see their favourite star. The event was mainly focused on Allu Arjun, and his presence became the major attraction.

This trend started gaining attention after Mahesh Babu entered the multiplex business with AMB Cinemas in Gachibowli, Hyderabad. The success of the multiplex showed that cinema-related businesses can become an important source of income for film stars.

After Mahesh Babu, several other actors also started exploring this business. Ravi Teja is associated with AART Cinemas, while Vijay Deverakonda has invested in a multiplex in Mahbubnagar. Allu Cinemas has also become a popular choice for movie lovers in Hyderabad.

The new AAA Cinemas in Vizag is expected to become another major destination for moviegoers. There is also growing interest in multiplex projects in other cities. A new IMAX project in Hyderabad is expected to have several well-known names associated with it, including Mahesh Babu, Venkatesh and Rana.

The multiplex business offers stars both financial and professional satisfaction. Since audiences are slowly moving away from traditional single-screen theatres, multiplexes are becoming more important in the modern cinema business.

There have also been reports that Ram Charan and Jr NTR are interested in the multiplex business. However, there are no confirmed major plans from them at present.

Ramayana has received huge attention because of its grand scale. The film stars Ranbir Kapoor, Sai Pallavi and Yash in important roles. The trailer has impressed viewers with its visuals, locations and large-scale presentation. Compared to the teaser, the trailer has received a better response. However, some viewers feel that the film depends heavily on visual effects. The real challenge for director Nitesh Tiwari will be to balance the spectacular visuals with strong emotions and devotion.

Toxic is another film that has created a lot of discussion. Yash plays the lead role in this action-packed movie. The trailer shows a dark and violent world with the actor in an intense role. Yash's screen presence is one of the biggest highlights. At the same time, some viewers have noticed similarities with the style of films like KGF and Animal. Still, the trailer has helped reduce some of the negative talk that followed the teaser.

The Paradise, starring Nani, is one of the most awaited Telugu films. The makers made changes to Nani's dubbing after receiving feedback. However, the teaser was very fast and left many viewers with questions about the story. This has increased curiosity, but some fans are still waiting for clearer information about the film.

Vishwanath & Sons offers something different. The film appears to focus on family emotions, relationships and romance. Director Venky Atluri's treatment has made the project interesting and created curiosity among movie lovers.

So, which trailer is the best? There is no clear winner yet. Ramayana stands out for scale, Toxic for action, The Paradise for mystery, and Vishwanath & Sons for emotions. Each film has its own strength, and audiences will finally decide the winner after the movies hit theatres.
