No Direction For Fee Reimbursement Why Trust Foreign Education - Bandi Sanjay kumar

Dayyala Rakesh Bhanu State Bureau Chief Hyderabad August 27: Union Minister of State for Home Affairs Bandi Nanjay Kumar has lashed out at the Congress government. He questioned why it is believed that there is no way to reimburse the students and that it will provide foreign education. He said that colleges are closing down because they have not received their fee dues. He said that it is ridiculous to say that world-renowned educational institutions will be brought in. "He questioned whether the CM is concerned about the mental anguish of lakhs of students. 'Can't you see the humiliation being inflicted on students by the college managements by not giving certificates? What has the Congress government achieved except threatening the college managements when they ask for fee arrears? Is it not concerned that Dalit, tribal and weaker section students are being kept away from higher education due to fee reimbursement arrears? Is Indira's rule meant to keep Dalit, tribal, poor and weaker section children away from higher education? What happened to the promise that all the arrears would be paid under one-time settlement?' Bandi Sanjay rained down questions. The Union Minister commented that the BRS government is surpassing the government in making promises and cheating. Immediately pay the fee reimbursement arrears of Rs. 15 thousand crores. He demanded to pay. As part of that, BJP State Chief Ramchandra Rao said that he had taken up the 'Fees Due - BJP Ladai' initiative. He expressed his complete solidarity with the initiative. He said that students across the state are protesting in support of the BJP State President's initiative. He made it clear that the struggle will continue until the Congress government bows its neck under the leadership of Ramchandra Rao. Union Minister Bandi Sanjay said that the state government should be responsible for the developments that will happen in the future.

Rahul, Kharge Protest Against Census Method "A long letter to PM Modi"

Direct voice Bureau Chief New Delhi August 27: Congress leaders Rahul Gandhi and Mallikarjun Kharge have protested against the census method. In this context, Kharge and Rahul wrote a long letter to Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday. In this letter, they mentioned several issues. They demanded that the Telangana model be implemented in the caste census. They strongly criticized the implementation of the 'open-ended' method for registering castes in the census. Rahul Gandhi and Mallikarjun Kharge expressed concern that the caste counting methods introduced by the central government are causing serious damage. They said that 'a single caste will be divided into lakhs of caste names and registered under different names. Due to this, the census data will become completely useless. They objected to the absence of the word 'backward classes' in the questionnaire. Rahul

Gandhi said that the 'drop-down list' method should be used for registering BC and OBC castes like SC and ST. "Mallikarjun Kharge suggested. The caste list samples used in the Telangana (2024) and Bihar (2022) surveys were sent to the Prime Minister. Kharge and Rahul demanded that the current confusing questionnaire be immediately scrapped and a new questionnaire be formulated after discussions with all parties and experts.

FRIDAY 28 AUGUST 2026

Modi Is Master Stoke

The debate on the crucial 'Jamili Election' policy, which is set to radically change the face of Indian politics, has begun again. The NDA government at the Centre is moving fast to hold the assembly elections of the 22 states and UTs under its rule simultaneously with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Efforts to bring about a major change in India's electoral system have been going on for a few months. The Joint Parliamentary Committee (JPC) is in full swing on the 'One Nation? One Election' proposal to hold Lok Sabha and Vidhan Sabha elections simultaneously. The committee chairman PP Chowdhury's recent update said that there is a large percentage of support among stakeholders and that the 2034 budget can be implemented in 2029 itself. This has now become a topic of discussion. According to JPC chairman PP Chowdhury, about 99 percent of the civil society, experts and various organizations consulted so far have spoken in favor of the mili elections. The committee is visiting several states and gathering opinions. He said that if the constitutional amendment is completed by 2028, there is a possibility of holding some legislative assemblies along with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. The consent of the state governments is key. It will be easier if some states dissolve their assemblies in advance and adjust the cycle. The BJP is in power on its own in 17 states of the country. In another five states, BJP allies are in power. Thus, there are NDA governments in a total of 22 states. Elections to the legislative assemblies of 11 NDA-ruled states will be held before the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Assembly elections in four other NDA states will be held along with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Elections to the remaining seven NDA-ruled states will be held between 2030-31. With this, the NDA government believes that there will be no major objections to holding the governments in their states either backward or forward for the upcoming elections. Since assembly elections are due in Andhra Pradesh, Arunachal Pradesh, Odisha, Sikkim, Haryana, Maharashtra and Jharkhand in 2029, there will be no major problems with the 'Jamili' process. However, the terms of the Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh, Karnataka, Tripura, Telangana, Meghalaya, Nagaland and Mizoram assemblies are ending in 2028. The terms of the respective assemblies will have to be extended by 5 months to a year for the upcoming elections. The terms of the Bihar, Delhi, Tamil Nadu, Kerala, West Bengal, Assam and Puducherry assemblies will end in 2030-31. Their terms will have to be reduced by one to two years. However, such a major reform requires a broad political consensus along with the Parliament's own changes. This proposal is likely to be strongly opposed by the opposition governments in power in states such as Jharkhand, Karnataka, Telangana, Tamil Nadu, Kerala and others. In this context, sources said that the NDA government has initially prepared a plan to continue the merger process in the 22 states in which it is in power. Although the target was set for 2034 earlier, the idea of bringing it forward is now gaining strength. This can be implemented in two phases. Congress leader P. Chidambaram, Priyanka Gandhi Vadra, Sagarika Ghosh, Supriya Sule and others participated in the meeting. Chidambaram strongly opposed it. He argued that the proposal in its current form would damage the basic structure of the Constitution and go against the principles of parliamentary democracy. He believed that reducing the tenure of elected assemblies was problematic. On the other hand, Padma awardees and some policy groups saw it as a national interest. However, it was suggested that adequate safeguards and clear rules are needed. There were also views that caution should be taken to ensure that the Election Commission does not get excessive powers. Supporters have repeatedly pointed out the economic losses caused by elections, disruption in development work, and administrative stagnation due to the model code. They argue that the Jamili elections will reduce costs and provide stability to governance. Opponents, on the other hand, point to the risk of weakening the federal system and regional issues being at the expense of the national. The possibility of merging issues and the impact on small parties are being considered. The JPC report has been postponed until the winter session. If there is political consensus, it can be partially implemented in 2029. Otherwise, it will go towards 2034. This proposal is an attempt to rebuild the functioning of Indian democracy. It is difficult to move forward without trust, constitutional safeguards, and the cooperation of the states. The future direction will be determined by parliamentary discussions and political will. When 'Skoll' spoke to analysts, activists, and political leaders on the caste enumeration policy, many things came to light. A majority of them said that the choice to not count castes was flawed. They questioned the Modi government's decision to stick to the 2011 model when states like Bihar, Telangana and others recently conducted the caste census. Some critics argued that the caste data collected in the census would become useless. On September 21, 2021, the Modi government filed an affidavit in the Supreme Court rejecting the caste enumeration petition. Paragraph 12(d) of the affidavit states that 'no caste registry was prepared before the 2011 census'. For the caste census, enumerators first ask people whether they belong to Scheduled Castes (SC) or Scheduled Tribes (ST). It is also possible that people do not want to declare their caste at this stage, The Hindu said. Critics argue that the questions without restrictions on caste will lead to a variety of answers, which does not provide a meaningful analysis. Sociologist Satish Deshpande, who has been arguing for the inclusion of caste in the census since 2001, has called it a deliberate failure. Asking multiple questions about caste can lead to people from the same community identifying themselves with different castes.

Small Acts of Kindness Pave the Way for Great Change

- Raising awareness about the importance of kindness and compassion
- The primary objective is to promote goodwill and harmony in society

The main objective of this day is to promote qualities such as kindness, empathy, respect, and generosity toward others. At a time when rapidly changing lifestyles are weakening human relationships to some extent, this day highlights the importance of mutual care and affection. It conveys the message that positive changes in society can be achieved by respecting the feelings of those around us. There is also a special purpose behind the origin of this thoughtful day. At a time when many people across the world are facing stress, anxiety, and loneliness, the initiative emerged with the idea of reminding people of the importance of understanding and supporting one another. Its primary goal can be described as reminding us that human relationships are more valuable in life than wealth or status. Social experts say that if every individual shows a little care toward family members, friends, neighbours, and colleagues, many problems can be resolved more easily. Often, an encouraging word, a smile, or a small act of help can give a person going through difficulties new courage. That is why thoughtfulness is considered a great human quality. On this occasion, various service activities are conducted in many places. These include helping orphaned children, visiting and supporting the elderly, extending assistance to economically disadvantaged families, and providing necessary support to patients. Such activities strongly convey the message that everyone in society should be treated with empathy and compassion. Although technology has advanced tremendously in recent times, there is a growing perception that personal connections are declining. Many people find themselves searching for someone with whom they can share their feelings. In such circumstances, listening patiently to others, understanding their situations, and standing by them when needed have become extremely valuable. Thoughtfulness does not necessarily have to be expressed only through major social service activities. It can also be reflected in simple everyday actions—respecting elders at home, understanding children's feelings, listening attentively to a friend's problems, and helping someone when necessary. By performing small acts of kindness every day, we can create a positive atmosphere in society. Thoughtfulness plays a crucial role in strengthening human relationships. It contributes to the growth of values such as mutual respect, trust, and cooperation. This quality is essential for creating an atmosphere of harmony within families, workplaces, and society. Experts therefore advise everyone to cultivate this quality in their daily behaviour. It is particularly important to instil values such as kindness, empathy, and responsibility in children from an early age. Educators believe that teaching children to respect others and help those in need from a young age can help them grow into responsible and compassionate citizens. This day reminds us of the importance of such values. Experts say that increasing mutual understanding is essential to reduce growing divisions and selfish tendencies in society. Many problems can be resolved when people make an effort to understand one another. Thoughtfulness acts as a bridge between people and plays a vital role in creating a friendly and harmonious environment. Overall, this Thoughtfulness Day encourages everyone to reflect on their own behaviour. It reminds us that a little care, a small amount of kindness, and some empathy toward others can bring light into many lives. The day conveys the message that only when values such as humanity, cooperation, and mutual respect become stronger can society move forward toward greater peace, happiness, and development.

The Bond of Rakhi — A Relationship Across Lifetimes

One bond is born by sharing the same blood, while another is formed by sharing the same hearts... The address of that beautiful bond is brothers and sisters... And the true embodiment of affection is the bond between siblings! Rakhi is not merely a thread tied around the wrist... It is a symbol of the love in a sister's heart, a testimony to the responsibility in a brother's heart, and a sweet memory of a bond that lasts across lifetimes! In the playful quarrels of childhood, that bond sparkled through innocent smiles... In the chocolates secretly saved for one another, and in the toys they shared, love quietly blossomed between them... A sister's scolding carries a mother's love... A younger brother's mischief brings back memories of childhood... A sister's pampering is filled with tender affection... And a brother's love gives the courage of a mountain! Time moves on... Childhood slowly fades away... Everyone's lives keep running along with time... But no matter how far apart they may be, no matter how many years pass, the bond between brothers and sisters only grows closer to the heart! When tears fill a sister's eyes, why does her brother's heart ache? When a brother faces difficulties, why does his sister's heart tremble with concern? That is the greatness of a blood relationship... That is the sacredness of the bond of Rakhi! At the moment when Rakhi is tied, a sister does not ask for money... A brother does not expect anything in return... All that matters is the simple wish, "May you always be happy..." And all the reassurance needed is, "I am always there for you." In the Rakhi tied by an elder sister, a younger brother sees her love... In the Rakhi tied by a younger sister, a brother remembers his responsibility... Within that tiny Rakhi lies the affection of an entire family, and a love that stands beside us throughout our entire lives! Many festivals come... and many festivals go... But Rakhi is special... Because it is not merely a colourful thread tied around the wrist; it is a bond that connects hearts! For a brother, his sister's smile is his greatest treasure... For a sister, her brother's love is her strongest support... For an elder sister, her younger brother is a precious part of her heart... And for a younger brother, his elder sister is an irreplaceable bond of affection! Along the journey of life, no matter how many twists and turns we face... no matter how far apart we may grow... no matter how many years pass... the memory of that hand tying the Rakhi, those affectionate words, and the sweet bond of childhood will never fade away! The thread may break... Time may change... Distances may grow... But the bond of love between brothers and sisters will never break! Rakhi is not just about protection... Rakhi means love... Rakhi means affection... Rakhi means trust... Rakhi means sacrifice... Rakhi means the eternal bond between brothers and sisters that remains together throughout life! Heartfelt Rakhi Purnima Wishes May every brother always see a beautiful smile on his sister's face... May every sister always have her brother standing by her side... May every elder sister be blessed with the love of her younger brother... May every younger brother always have his elder sister's blessings in his life... May this sacred bond of Rakhi fill every home with love, and fill every heart with happiness! Happy Rakhi Purnimai...

Why A Tiny Country Like Armenia Is Buying Billions In Indian Arms

India's Defence Secretary, Rajesh Kumar Singh, was recently on an official visit to Armenia, testifying to deepening defence cooperation between the two countries. He held high-level talks with Minister of Defence Suren Papikyan and Chief of the General Staff Lt. Gen. Edward Asryan, discussing expanding defence supplies and potential joint initiatives, while exchanging a document establishing a new framework for direct cooperation between the General Staffs of both armed forces. This marks a structural shift from procurement toward closer operational and staff-level engagement. In their negotiations, attended also by the Indian Ambassador in Yerevan, Nilakshi Saha Sinha, they addressed regional and international security dynamics, highlighting the strategic alignment of both nations regarding South Caucasus stability and cooperation. The news of the visit was immediately branded by the media as symptomatic of greater subterranean shifts, coming as it did a few days after the announcement of the Mecca Pact between Saudi Arabia, Turkey, and Pakistan, which Bangladesh is also now aspiring to. Even Iran, apparently, has been invited to join the pact, but there is no clarity on this yet. Since visits like this are planned in advance, it is highly doubtful that the Mecca Pact triggered it. Moreover, such visits are becoming increasingly more frequent. Asryan was in India earlier this year, while the then Chief of Defence Staff, Gen. Anil Chauhan, was in Armenia, where he inaugurated research facilities, underscoring the importance of joint training. Reportedly, Armenian special forces have undergone training in India's defense institutions. More Than Just Defence Most significantly, however, the tiny country has emerged as India's largest weapons buyer, giving an enormous boost to India's defence sector. Beginning with the SWATHI radar system, Armenia's imports of India's defence wares amount to approximately $2 billion, and include the Pinaka multi-barrel rocket launcher system and the indigenous Akash air defence missiles system. Given India's policy of boosting defence exports and transitioning to an arms-exporting country, this naturally elevates Armenia's position in India's strategic calculus. But it also raises the fundamental question - is Armenia significant only for its defence imports from us? With defence ties including capacity building, joint manufacturing, and setting up of joint manufacturing bases in Armenia, the ties are synergised by the fact that the country has a large pool of specialists. It can become a hub for defence exports further to countries in the region and beyond to Eastern Europe. Over the recent past, events have demonstrated numerous reasons for finding alternatives to the trade routes passing through the Suez Canal. This is one of the reasons that trade corridors like the North-South Transport Corridor (INSTC), and, more recently, the India-Middle East Economic Corridor

(IMEEC), were mooted. With the Middle East in the throes of conflict for more than three years now, made worse by the war against Iran, the IMEEC has been put on the back burner. A 'Crossroads Of Peace' Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan unveiled his government's project launched to turn Armenia into a "Crossroads of Peace". Leveraging its unique location as the heart of the South Caucasus, the plan aims to turn the country into a trade, transport, and communications hub, and enable countries of the region to access European and Asian markets, and vice versa. This would herald a more secure, stable, and sustainable trade and economic relations for the Eurasian region at large. Armenia is a unique country. Its people have faced genocide, the ravages of war, loss of lands and property. Currently, it is also facing a refugee influx in the aftermath of the loss of Karabakh territory to arch-rival and neighbour, Azerbaijan. But the country is looking ahead and forward. It is currently negotiating a peace treaty with Azerbaijan and has embarked on a process of normalisation with Turkey. The latter has allowed for direct trade and connectivity between Yerevan and Ankara, which is a prelude to some much bigger dividends both sides can reap through connectivity and access beyond the borders of both countries. Understanding the geopolitical and geoeconomic benefits that can accrue, the US has now involved itself in this infrastructurally, through the Trump Route for Peace and Prosperity (TRIPP) project, which traverses through Armenia and Azerbaijan, making up a 43-kilometer-long transit passage through southern Armenia along the Armenia-Iran border, which will connect Azerbaijan to its enclave of Nakhichevan.

Weevil-Mediated Pollination Is Key To High Oil Palm Yields Farmers Must Regularly Monitor For The Presence Of Weevils District Horticulture and Sericulture Officer Gaddam Shyam Prasad

Bureau Chief Peddapally August 27 : District Horticulture and Sericulture Officer Gaddam Shyam Prasad stated that as the area under oil palm cultivation expands in Peddapalli district, farmers are achieving high yields by adopting scientific management practices. He noted that ensuring effective pollination in oil palms can significantly increase fruit set (fruit formation) in the bunches. Mr. Shyam Prasad participated in a program to release oil palm-pollinating weevils in Sultanpur village, Eligedu Mandal where he explained the importance of these insects to the farmers. He stated that natural pollination in oil palm crops occurs most effectively through weevils. He explained that while wind-based pollination is limited, weevils efficiently transport pollen between flowers, resulting in higher levels of pollination and increased fruit set. He advised farmers to regularly monitor the population and activity of weevils in their oil palm plantations. He advised farmers to consult Horticulture Department officials and take necessary measures if they observe issues such as improper pollination or a reduction in the number of fruits within the bunches in their oil palm plantations. Shyam Prasad stated that achieving high oil palm yields requires balanced fertilizer management, adequate water supply, drip irrigation, weed control, proper care during the flowering stage, and pest monitoring, alongside effective pollination. He noted that farmers in Peddapalli district are achieving improved annual yields by maintaining their oil palm plantations using scientific methods, and assured that the Horticulture Department would continue to provide necessary technical guidance and awareness programs in the future. The District Horticulture and Sericulture Officer suggested that farmers could secure higher yields by regularly monitoring their plantations for the presence of weevils, the status of pollination, and the condition of flowers and fruit sets.

Warangal MP Kadiyam Kavya submitted a representation to State Minister and In-charge Minister for the undivided Warangal district, Ponguleti Srinivas Reddy

Direct voice Bureau Chief Warangal August 27: Urging him to take steps to allocate railway land for the construction of the new Kazipet bus stand. Benefits of constructing the new bus stand at the Kazipet Railway Station The Kazipet crossroads, which has not seen expansion for years, will be widened. The long standing difficulties faced by small-scale vendors will be resolved. The Railways will generate additional revenue through a commercial complex. The Kazipet crossroads will be beautified to serve as a welcoming gateway to Warangal city. A bus stand located at the Railway Stadium in close proximity to the Kazipet Junction premises and accessible via numerous trains is expected to receive a positive response from the thousands of passengers traveling through the station. The YSR Nagar site should remain a residential colony constructing a bus stand there would make it inconvenient for passengers. After alighting at the railway station, passengers would find it difficult to cross the junction to reach the YSR Nagar site, forcing them to rely on auto rickshaws or private vehicles instead. Consequently, low passenger footfall would make it difficult for the RTC to operate the bus stand. The bus stand project should not be linked to the YSR Nagar site; instead, the current residents of that area should be supported by having double-bedroom houses constructed and provided to them right there. The 100-bed hospital sanctioned for Kazipet should also be constructed on the remaining land. Building a large hospital here would make healthcare easily accessible to the thousands of residents from Kazipet and the surrounding villages. This has been the consistent demand all along.

Early Raksha Bandhan Celebrations Organized by RSS

Bureau Chief Vemulawada, August 27: Raksha Bandhan celebrations were held with great enthusiasm in Vemulawada town under the aegis of the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS). These events took place at various government and private schools in the town, with students in attendance. Speaking on the occasion, the keynote speaker, Nandi Shivakumar, stated that Hindu dharma is the very soul of India. He explained the significance of the Raksha Bandhan festival and the importance of the bond of brotherhood to the students. He emphasized that Raksha Bandhan is not merely a festival of tying the Rakhi but a symbol of mutual protection, responsibility, and affection. He remarked that fostering mutual brotherhood and unity in society would help eliminate various social ills and strengthen the community. He also highlighted the need to instill patriotism, social responsibility, and a sense of mutual respect among students. The debate on the crucial 'Jamili Election' policy, which is set to radically change the face of Indian politics Modi Is Master Stoke

"The debate on the crucial 'Jamili Election' policy, which is set to radically change the face of Indian politics, has begun again. The NDA government at the Centre is moving fast to hold the assembly elections of the 22 states and UTs under its rule simultaneously with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Efforts to bring about a major change in India's electoral system have been going on for a few months. The Joint Parliamentary Committee (JPC) is in full swing on the 'One Nation? One Election' proposal to hold Lok Sabha and Vidhan Sabha elections simultaneously. The committee chairman PP Chowdhury's recent update said that there is a large percentage of support among stakeholders and that the 2034 budget can be implemented in 2029 itself. This has now become a topic of discussion. According to JPC chairman PP Chowdhury, about 99 percent of the civil society, experts and various organizations consulted so far have spoken in favor of the mili elections. The committee is visiting several states and gathering opinions. He said that if the constitutional amendment is completed by 2028, there is a possibility of holding some legislative assemblies along with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. The consent of the state governments is key. It will be easier if some states dissolve their assemblies in advance and adjust the cycle. The BJP is in power on its own in 17 states of the country. In another five states, BJP allies are in power. Thus, there are NDA governments in a total of 22 states. Elections to the legislative assemblies of 11 NDA-ruled states will be held before the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Assembly elections in four other NDA states will be held along with the 2029 Lok Sabha elections. Elections to the remaining seven NDA-ruled states will be held between 2030-31. With this, the NDA government believes that there will be no major objections to holding the governments in their states either backward or forward for the upcoming elections. Since assembly elections are due in Andhra Pradesh, Arunachal Pradesh, Odisha, Sikkim, Haryana, Maharashtra and Jharkhand in 2029, there will be no major problems with the 'Jamili' process. However, the terms of the Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh, Karnataka, Tripura, Telangana, Meghalaya, Nagaland and Mizoram assemblies are ending in 2028. The terms of the respective assemblies will have to be extended by 5 months to a year for the upcoming elections. The terms of the Bihar, Delhi, Tamil Nadu, Kerala, West Bengal, Assam and Puducherry assemblies will end in 2030-31. Their terms will have to be reduced by one to two years. However, such a major reform requires a broad political consensus along with the Parliament's own changes. This proposal is likely to be strongly opposed by the opposition governments in power in states such as Jharkhand, Karnataka, Telangana, Tamil Nadu, Kerala and others. In this context, sources said that the NDA government has initially prepared a plan to continue the merger process in the 22 states in which it is in power. Although the target was set for 2034 earlier, the idea of ??bringing it forward is now gaining strength. This can be implemented in two phases. Congress leader P. Chidambaram, Priyanka Gandhi Vadra, Sagarika Ghosh, Supriya Sule and others participated in the meeting. Chidambaram strongly opposed it. He argued that the proposal in its current form would damage the basic structure of the Constitution and go against the principles of parliamentary democracy. He believed that reducing the tenure of elected assemblies was problematic. On the other hand, Padma awardees and some policy groups saw it as a national interest. However, it was suggested that adequate safeguards and clear rules are needed. There were also views that caution should be taken to ensure that the Election Commission does not get excessive powers. Supporters have repeatedly pointed out the economic losses caused by elections, disruption in development work, and administrative stagnation due to the model code. They argue that the Jamili elections will reduce costs and provide stability to governance. Opponents, on the other hand, point to the risk of weakening the federal system and regional issues being at the expense of the national."The possibility of merging issues and the impact on small parties are being considered. The JPC report has been postponed until the winter session. If there is political consensus, it can be partially implemented in 2029. Otherwise, it will go towards 2034. This proposal is an attempt to rebuild the functioning of Indian democracy. It is difficult to move forward without trust, constitutional safeguards, and the co-operation of the states. The future direction will be determined by parliamentary discussions and political will. When 'Skoll' spoke to analysts, activists, and political leaders on the caste enumeration policy, many things came to light. A majority of them said that the choice to not count castes was flawed. They questioned the Modi government's decision to stick to the 2011 model when states like Bihar, Telangana and others recently conducted the caste census. Some critics argued that the caste data collected in the census would become useless. On September 21, 2021, the Modi government filed an affidavit in the Supreme Court rejecting the caste enumeration petition. Paragraph 12(d) of the affidavit states that 'no caste registry was prepared before the 2011 census'.

Women Leaders of Social Stability

Direct Voice Bureau Chief Warangal August 27: History is witness to the fact that the role of women in the development and development of any nation is not merely supportive but fundamental and decisive. Especially in a Muslim society, where family is considered the unit of society, the role of women plays a key role in forming a stable, cohesive and resilient society.A silent revolution is taking place in the homes schools offices and neighborhoods of the country, led by women who rarely seek acknowledgment of their work. Among them, the position of Muslim women holds special importance. Not because they have a loud voice, but because their services have often been carried out under the shadow of dual surveillance: the women present within their community, and the Muslims present in the wider society, which is still learning to see them beyond traditional notions. But when looked at closely, a very different picture emerges, one of perseverance, strength and quiet leadership that held families and communities together through decades of change."This chain, as it always happens, starts at home. The Muslim mother has long been the first architect of stability, raising her children not just for survival but with an attachment to their religion, their culture and their homeland. Where resources are limited and opportunities difficult, they bear the brunt of economic difficulties, communal tension and social prejudice, and still send their children to school with self confidence. This is not some passive background character. This is the hardest kind of leadership, exercised without position or compensation, and it is the foundation on which every other form of social power is built.As a mother, woman is the first and most important teacher of the society. She inculcates moral values, patience, compassion, and courage to face difficult situations boldly in her children. This home-based training is actually the foundation on which a strong and crisis-resistant economy is built. When a mother raises her children to be responsible citizens she is actually laying the foundation for social resilience. This same spirit of upbringing has also reached schools in the last few decades. Muslim women teachers, many of whom are the first in their families to complete higher education, have now become, in the literal sense, the protectors of the future of the community. They not only teach arithmetic and language but also self confidence, especially to girls who might otherwise have been married off at a young age or confined to the house. Today, whenever a Muslim woman stands in front of the blackboard, she is silently rejecting the old adage that modern education and religion cannot go together, and thus, she is opening doors for the coming generations which were closed during the time of their mothers.Moving beyond schools, Muslim women have gradually entered professions that were once considered closed to them, namely medicine, law, journalism, engineering, administration and business. Their presence in these areas is important for two reasons. It's solid proof that devotion and professional determination are not at odds with each other, and it provides young girls with the shining examples they need to envision their futures. A doctor who works in the operation theater with a hijab, or a lawyer who fights cases while practicing her religion, does more for the trust of the community than speeches. This professional self-confidence has gradually taken the form of guidance. Muslim women are now stepping up to mentor the youth of their community, organizing study circles, career counseling and skill building workshops, often on a voluntary basis and after their working hours. She understands perhaps better than anyone the specific issues young Muslims face regarding identity aspirations and belonging in today's complex social environment, and she offers guidance in the light of her personal experience, not based on any adopted ideology. This guidance is slowly filling a gap that regulated institutions have so far been slow to fill.And finally, at the community level, Muslim women are now at the forefront of welfare work, distributing food, health camps, assisting widows and the elderly, and mobilizing resources in times of crisis with a speed and compassion that even formal institutions sometimes cannot match. These initiatives, often based on self investment and selfmanagement, reflect a spirit of social caring that has always been present in Muslim women's circles, but is only now receiving the recognition it deserves.As nurturing mothers, empowering teachers, encouraging professional women, guiding nurses, and serving welfare workers, Muslim women are not merely participants in the life of the community, but are architects of its stability. And ultimately the strength of a nation depends on the strength of its smallest units. When women lead their communities through hardships with dignity and purpose, they are not just keeping families together, they are quietly building entire nations.Certainly, when the women of a society are strong, intelligent and active, then no power in the world can stop the progress and happiness of that nation, because a stable family is the foundation of a stable nation.

Why Did Jagan Celebrate Rakhi Two Days In Advance?

Amaravati, August, 27: Rakhi Pournima is on the 28th of this month. Political Leaders make it a point to give appointments to Women leaders in the party and get Rakhi tied by them to showcase themselves as the Saviors of women.

In Tadepalli, YSR Congress Women leaders met Jagan yesterday and tied Rakhi for him. The visuals and Photographs are already out on social media.

But why tie Rakhis two days in advance of the Festival?

That is because Jagan has to leave for Bengaluru. Jagan is staying three to four days in Bengaluru and is coming to Andhra Pradesh for 3-4 days.

The Andhra Pradesh Stay is done, and so he advanced the Rakhi Festival by two days and finished the Rakhi rituals before the festival and flew to Bengaluru.

He will be staying in his Yelahanka Palace over the weekend and will return to Vijayawada next week. However, things like this are unnecessary bad impressions.

He could have stayed two more days in Andhra and celebrated the festival as per the norm. Or at least, the party should have released the visuals on the festival day.

Minister Slams Jagan, Says Speculative Remarks Aimed at Retaining Cadre

Amaravati, August 27:

Former Chief Minister Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy's style of functioning has left not only YSRCP leaders but also the party cadre frustrated, Minister Kolusu Parthasarathy said. Speaking to the media on Thursday, he alleged that Jagan was making speculative comments merely to appease the cadre and prevent them from drifting away from the party.

Taking a dig at Jagan, he asked whether the former Chief Minister had failed to notice the impact of El Niño until recently because of Bengaluru's cooler climate. He said Jagan was losing awareness of the situation in Andhra Pradesh because he was spending most of his time in Bengaluru.

The minister questioned what the YSRCP chief had done for Rayalaseema apart from repeatedly laying foundation stones for the same steel plant for which he had already performed the foundation ceremony. While Jagan allegedly ran the state for five years through destruction, the coalition government is moving forward with reconstruction, Parthasarathy said. He accused Jagan of functioning like banned organisations in an attempt to spread falsehoods among the people. The minister said that if the previous government had completed the Polavaram project during its five-year tenure, the impact of El Niño would not have been so severe. He further said that YSRCP leaders who are criticising the release of water from Prakasam Barrage are only demonstrating that they are anti-farmer.

Another Small Film Scores A Sensational Hit At The Box Office

At a time when big-budget films are struggling to sustain momentum, a small devotional drama has emerged as the surprise hit of the season. Hanuman Ansh, based on the life of Neem Karoli Baba, has staged a remarkable box-office turnaround after a slow start.

The film collected just around Rs 1.30 crore net in its first two weeks and was even reduced to a handful of screens in several circuits. However, strong word of mouth completely changed its fortunes.

Exhibitors began increasing shows across the country as audience demand surged. The film's screen count reportedly jumped from around 40 screens in week two to nearly 400 screens in week three.

The real twist came in week three as the film has now crossed Rs 8 crore net and continues to grow despite the arrival of big releases like Toxic. Trade reports indicate that areas like Delhi, UP, Punjab, and Mumbai have emerged as its strongest markets. What makes this achievement even more impressive is the film's modest budget. Having already recovered its costs, Hanuman Ansh is firmly in the profit zone and is now heading towards one of the biggest sleeper hits of 2026.

Vishwak Sen's 'LEGACY' Enters Final Schedule, December Release Locked

Mass Ka Das Vishwak Sen's upcoming film 'LEGACY', directed by Saikiran Reddy Daida and produced under the Kalaahi Media banner, has entered its final stage of production. The intense political action drama is being produced by Yeshwanth Dagumati and Saikiran Reddy Daida, with Sanjay Sambrani and V.V.N. Prasad as co-producers.

The film generated considerable curiosity with its announcement teaser released earlier this year. 'LEGACY' marks the second production venture from Kalaahi Media, following the critically acclaimed 'Pindam', which was also directed by Saikiran Reddy Daida.

A Story About Power, Family and Legacy

Set against a powerful political backdrop, 'LEGACY' explores the collision of power, family, love and betrayal. The story follows a reluctant heir who is drawn into a dangerous world he never wanted to enter. As buried truths emerge and ruthless enemies close in, he is forced to confront the enormous weight of his father's legacy. Vishwak Sen will be seen in a striking new avatar, delivering an intense and layered performance. Acclaimed actor Kay Kay Menon plays a formidable antagonist, adding another dimension to the film's dramatic conflict.

Final Schedule Begins in Madanapalle

The makers have commenced a month-long shooting schedule in and around Madanapalle in Chittoor district. The principal cast will participate in the schedule, which will include crucial narrative sequences, high-intensity action episodes and songs.

The technical team includes cinematographer Jiju Sunny, music composer Govind Vasantha, editor Sirish Prasad, production designer Rajeev Nair and action choreographer Jashuva. The film's sound design is handled by Sync Cinema, with Dolby Atmos by E. Radhakrishna at Prasad Mixing Theatre.

Impressive Ensemble Cast

Alongside Vishwak Sen and Kay Kay Menon, the film features an ensemble cast comprising Murali Mohan, Rao Ramesh, Sachin Khedekar, Ekta Rathod, Raja Ravindra, Rajeev Kanakala, Aneesh Kuruvilla, Khushee Ravi, Kalyani Natarajan, Collector Srinivas, Ravi Kaale, Amit Tiwari and others. Mounted on an impressive scale, 'LEGACY' promises a combination of gripping political drama, powerful emotions, striking music and explosive action.

More than a story about inheriting power, the film explores a compelling question: Does a legacy deserve to be carried forward, or should it be rewritten? 'LEGACY' is written and directed by Saikiran Reddy Daida and is scheduled for a worldwide theatrical release in December.

I'll Shave My Head in Ameerpet Centre : Heroine's Bold Statement

The team of Sahaa is making strong and over-the-top statements about the film, and now it is the turn of heroine Swetha Lakshman who has taken the confidence to another level during the film's press conference today. Swetha Lakshman said that Sahaa will not disappoint anyone.

Swetha made a bold statement, saying that if anyone feels disappointed after watching the film, she is ready to stand on Ameerpet Main Road and get her head shaved. It is certainly a big statement from the actress, especially ahead of the film's release on Sep 4. Such strong claims are now becoming a talking point among industry circles and social media.

Meanwhile, hero Kumar Kasaram also made a big claim about the film's box-office prediction earlier. Kumar Kasaram said that if Sahaa gets enough theatres, the film will surely cross ₹50 crore gross. He expressed confidence that the movie would get good word of mouth and said that families would connect with the film and come to theatres in groups. While the confidence from the Sahaa team is clear, such tall and bold and unrealistic statements have triggered mixed reactions. Some feel that the team is boasting it off to grab headlines and attention in the media as the film is less known to audiences. With the heroine now making such a bold statement, industry circles are wondering if this is the confidence or overconfidence of the team. However, let the audiences and the box office decide.

Kareena Kapoor's Back To Back South Collaborations

Kareena Kapoor is making headlines not just for her upcoming films but also for her films with South stars. She will next be seen alongside Malayalam superstar Prithviraj Sukumaran in Daayra, a crime drama directed by Meghna Gulzar. The film is scheduled to release on September 18, and the pairing has become a talking point. Interestingly, Kareena's South connection is only getting better. Industry reports suggest that she is in advanced discussions to star opposite Dhanush in a large-scale mythological jungle adventure backed by Sanjay Leela Bhansali. If finalized, the film will mark the first-ever on-screen pairing of Kareena and Dhanush, creating significant excitement among fans. Over the years, Kareena has largely shared screen space with Bollywood's biggest stars.

However, Kareena's recent choices indicate that she is keen on doing content-driven projects and collaborations that go beyond language. With Prithviraj in Daayra and a possible film with Dhanush, many are praising her willingness to explore films with South stars.

There were also rumours a few months ago that Kareena Kapoor would play crucial roles in Prabhas' Spirit and Yash's Toxic, but neither collaboration materialised. Social media users have already begun discussing Kareena's choices who is actively embracing Pan-India collaborations, though she is a bit late to the trend. One needs to see what kind of films she does in the days to come.

Rajinikanth Vs Vijay: An Interesting Clash Is Loading?

This Dasara season is going to be a packed one for the South Indian audience as we have multiple options coming up at the box office. There are two notable films in the contention here and they are Jailer 2 and Ranabaali.

Jailer 2 is an action film featuring superstar Rajinikanth in the lead role, and it comes with the franchise advantage as well. It is the extension of earlier Jailer, which was a big success at the box office. This is preparing for its release on October 15, and the promotional campaign has started already.

On the other hand, we have the case of Ranabaali featuring Vijay Devarakonda and Rashmika Mandanna in the lead roles. This film is confirmed to be releasing in theatres on October 16, on the occasion of Dasara. In terms of Telugu box office, we have an interesting prospect brewing. This is largely due to the superstardom that Rajinikanth has in the Telugu states and the significant performance of Jailer, which will add elevated platform to the second part now. This clash might not be direct in nature, but there will be certain friction between the two films here. As for Ranabaali, the return of the pair of Vijay Devarakonda and Rashmika Mandanna on the big screen is creating a lot of anticipation as this happens to be their first appearance on screen after marriage. There is a lot to look forward to for this film, as fans are also hoping a big comeback with the same. It is interesting to note that we have multiple good options coming up this Dasara weekend, and we have to hope that all the films entertain the audience and make moolah at the box office.

Chiranjeevi To Have 2 Films Released with 1 Month?

Megastar Chiranjeevi's most awaited film Vishwambhara has been one of the most talked-about projects among Mega fans. The film is directed by Vassishtha, who made an impressive debut with Bimbisara, starring Nandamuri Kalyan Ram. Vishwambhara created strong hype when it was announced, but VFX negativity and the lack of regular updates has disappointed Mega fans to some extent. Fans have been eagerly waiting for clarity on the film's release. Now, as per the latest buzz, there seems to be some change in the film's release plans. If Vishwambhara's pending works, including VFX work and post-production activities, are completed on time, the makers are reportedly looking at a December release. However, a December release appears to be mostly not possible at this stage, considering the amount of work that still needs to be completed. The film has extensive VFX and post-production work, and the makers are unlikely to rush the final output. Meanwhile, there are several other films lined up in December. Prabhas Fauzi, Nandamuri Balakrishna's NBK 111 and Nagarjuna's King 100 are set to arrive in December and make year-ending box-office clash very interesting. Meanwhile, Chiranjeevi's other much-awaited film Kaaka, directed by Bobby and produced by Toxic makers, KVN Productions, is gearing up for a Sankranti release. If Vishwambhara arrives in December and Kaaka releases during Sankranti, Chiranjeevi could have two major releases within a gap of just one month. This has naturally raised eyebrows in trade circles.
