US deepens strategic footprint in Pacific with $150 million package

The United States is significantly expanding its strategic engagement with Pacific Island nations as it announced more than USD 150 million in new initiatives spanning energy security, ports, digital infrastructure, maritime enforcement, critical minerals and private-sector investment as Washington seeks to reinforce its position in the increasingly contested Indo-Pacific.

Deputy Secretary of State Christopher Landau is on a tour to Palau, the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM), Solomon Islands, and Kiribati from August 31 to September 11. In Palau, he attended the Pacific Islands Forum Partners Dialogue and said that the United States remains committed to a free and open Indo-Pacific and to strengthening long-term partnerships with Pacific Island governments.

But the scale and composition of the new package point to an approach that goes beyond conventional development assistance. Washington is increasingly treating infrastructure, resilient supply chains, secure digital networks, energy access and maritime governance as components of regional security.

The announcement represents a broad expansion of US engagement across the region, with initiatives spanning energy security, ports and transportation, digital infrastructure, maritime security, law enforcement, investment and people-to-people ties.

"When the Pacific Islands are stable, secure and prosperous, the United States is too."

The administration said the initiatives reflect President Donald Trump's and Secretary of State Marco Rubio's foreign-policy priorities, with a greater emphasis on commercial diplomacy, US private-sector participation and infrastructure designed to support sustainable, market-driven economic growth.

A major component of the package is a proposed USD 60 million Regional Energy Security Initiative. Working with Congress, the State Department intends to help Pacific Island countries respond to the global energy crisis by expanding fuel-storage capacity and improving electricity-grid stability, the official statement said.

In Tonga, the US Trade and Development Agency, with State Department funding, will support a feasibility study examining upgrades to port facilities, fuel storage, pipeline infrastructure and regulatory practices aimed at strengthening fuel-supply reliability and energy security.

In Palau, the United States, Australia, Japan, New Zealand, South Korea, and Taiwan are supporting plans for a new modern hospital, subject to the outcome of a feasibility study. The project is intended to address Palau's long-term health and infrastructure requirements.

In the Cook Islands, the State Department, working with Congress and New Zealand, intends to support upgrades to Omoka Port on Penrhyn Atoll. The project builds on the US-Cook Islands Critical Minerals Framework signed in February 2026 and is expected to improve safety, transportation links and economic opportunities.

The United States is also supporting the modernization of the Marshall Islands' key transportation infrastructure. USTDA has approved technical assistance for upgrades to the Majuro and Ebeye ports, targeting greater freight capacity, more efficient port operations and stronger supply chains.

Additional USTDA assistance will examine the modernization of Amata Kabua International Airport, including airfield and terminal facilities, while creating potential opportunities for US aviation companies.

The United States is seeking to turn diplomatic engagement into deeper commercial ties with Pacific Island economies.

The inaugural US-Pacific Islands Investment Summit, held at the East-West Center in Honolulu in February 2026, generated business opportunities and deals across infrastructure, critical minerals, supply chains, energy, tourism, food security, financial services and the digital economy. Washington now intends to support a second Pacific Investment Summit in early 2027, with the goal of expanding connections between US companies and Pacific Island businesses and governments.

In Tonga, USTDA is supporting a feasibility study to modernize the country's national data center and network, enabling more secure and resilient hosting of government systems and public services. The initiative complements US support for Tonga's migration to secure cloud services.

In the Marshall Islands, USTDA will provide technical assistance to modernize the nationwide mobile network, including assessments of technology options, financing models and implementation strategies.

The State Department also plans to expand its Cloud Global Pacific Program, building on work in Tonga and Palau to encourage Pacific governments to adopt resilient cloud-based technologies. Washington says trusted cloud infrastructure can strengthen cybersecurity, expand the digital economy and improve government continuity.

US-backed digital programs have also focused on strengthening telecommunications regulation and investment frameworks. A recent Pacific digital transformation initiative generated 32 matchmaking sessions between US technology companies and Pacific Island governments, opening potential opportunities for American AI exports and digital-sector investment.

Meanwhile, the US is simultaneously strengthening security cooperation with Pacific partners. The United States and Palau will co-chair the inaugural US-Pacific Islands Conference of Police Ministers (COPMIN), focusing on maritime security, drug trafficking, cybercrime and illicit finance.

Washington also plans to provide USD 17 million to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing across the Pacific. The initiative is expected to support legal and regulatory reforms, strengthen enforcement capacity and deploy technology to improve monitoring.

The State Department also plans to support seabed mapping, exploration and characterization, giving Pacific governments greater information for decision-making on potential seabed mineral development and related regulatory frameworks.

The US Environmental Protection Agency, in partnership with Taiwan, will work with Palau on comprehensive sampling of drinking-water sources and wells. The initiative will include training for water-system operators and environmental laboratory personnel on sampling and logistical procedures.

The Peace Corps has signed a letter of intent with the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and Palau to establish a North Pacific program.

The initiative builds on decades of US engagement. More than 4,400 Peace Corps Volunteers served in Micronesia and Palau between 1966 and 2018, while more than 140 served in the Marshall Islands between 1966 and 1996. The Peace Corps completed the reopening of its Palau program in July 2026. The latest commitments demonstrate that Washington's Pacific strategy extends well beyond traditional diplomacy.

Energy infrastructure, ports, aviation, critical minerals, telecommunications, cloud computing, maritime enforcement and commercial investment are increasingly being treated as interconnected elements of regional security.

For the United States, the Pacific Islands are strategically important because of resilient infrastructure, secure supply chains, and stronger regional economies can create opportunities for American businesses while strengthening the security of US partners.

Home & Garden

10 cool ways to go Green

And no, you do not need to go on a planting drive or install a compactor in your home to go eco-friendly. Here's listing 10 ways you can do your bit for the environment. Apart from them being hassle-free and cool, you can start doing them right from your home. So, chop chop.

1. CARPOOL:

You must have noticed the unimaginable jump in the number of personal vehicles in the city in the last five years? Well, according to a Barclays report - Megatrends: Accelerating urbanization in India -the country's transportation infrastructure is unable to keep up with its rapid urbanization rates.

Result: 8 hours and 15 km-long traffic jam on Delhi-Gurgaon expressway on May 22, this year. Even if you weren't stuck in the jam, you must be tasting this bitter pill every day on your way to work. Solution? Carpool.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Because, you get a break from driving every day and you get to drive on roads that do not feel like Gariahat during Chaitra sale!

2. RECYCLE AND GET CRAFTY:

If you have an artiste inside you who hasn't had an outlet yet, this is your chance. Recycle your alcohol, sauce, jelly and soft drink bottles. Paint on them to turn them into centrepieces or vases. You can even use them as unusual planters for your plants. Youtube papermache and start using up the unending piles of newspapers you have hoarded in between. Instead of throwing away takeaway containers and pizza boxes, use them to store your trinkets and accessories like hair bands or tie-pins. Use your old CDs as coasters. Yes, there's no end to the stuff you can DIY while recycling, cling

WHY IS IT COOL?

Because doing it yourself is the latest thing, but mostly because it has got an acronym.

3. UNPLUG:

No, we aren't talking metaphorically not about suddenly. It's walking up to your boss and going bam, "I need a break" one day. No, we mean literally. Stop leaving your mobile chargers hanging from the plug point even when not in use or even when not in use or putting your computers and televisions on sleep-mode at night. Simply unplug. Because you might think that the appliances are not plugged into the chargers to consume electricity, but simply leaving them plugged keeps the electricity running through them.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Because wires are a nuisance. They are messy and knotty. Who wants them hanging around even when there's no need?

4. DONATE TO FOOD BANKS:

Mummy was right. The recent pictures of hungry kids from quake-hit Nepal reinforced that belief in us all over again. So what to do with the excess food products that we simply can't stop buying from the supermarkets all the while knowing they are of no use? Donate them to food banks. Never heard of these banks? Well, they are organizations that collect leftover food from big restaurants to distribute amongst the underprivileged. Look for one in your vicinity and get in touch.

WHY IS IT COOL?

You will be starting a trend that most of your cool friends are still unaware of.

5. GO FOR JUTE AND THE KHADI:

From international runways to Esplanade pavement, natural fabric is the haute trend this season.

These natural fabrics are massively helping designers to merchants, consumers to weavers.

And, we aren't only talking about clothes. Everything from bags to lampshades, curtains to doormats come in these natural fabrics.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Because even Stella McCartney has pledged her commitment to sustainable green fashion.

6. MOVE IN: Think about it. It saves the entire daily utilities of another home. Save on the rent, electricity, cooking gas, water... should we go on? For the commitment phobic people out there, this is one leap of faith you can take. one leap of faith you can take.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Do we have to spell it out, dumbos? Wink, wink.

7. INVEST IN A KHUS KHUS MAT INSTEAD OF RENTING A COOLER:

Renting coolers during summers is a common thing for students staying in hostels or PGs. But a khush khush mat is so much cheaper! Just invest in one and douse it in water regularly after hanging it from the window.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Apart from the fact that it makes the living area much cooler, it also lends the room a retro look. If you can pair that up with a khush khush floor mat too, well you are almost on your way to being an interior designer. Ok, not that.

8. GO DIGITAL:

If you haven't already, it's high time you shift your banking and billing to the online and phone-banking portals. Seriously, when you have the option of sitting in the comfort of your home and pay your phone and electricity bills through the internet, why would you want to go out (or make someone else go out on your behalf) in this heat? It saves energy, fuel, trees and mostly time.

It's World Environment Day today . And even if you are someone who is principally against celebrating special days, this is one of those commemorations that can do with your help.

WHY IS IT COOL?

Because, c'mon, it's the digital age and you cannot afford to be left behind. Do you seriously want people to stare at you when you tell them that you have to leave early because you need to pay the phone bill? Who does that anymore!

9. PEE IN YOUR GARDEN:

Stop laughing. Stop smirking. Stop hawking! It's an easy and natural way of going green. The average flush drains at least three litres of water everytime you flush after peeing. That's a lot of water if you consider the fact that India is facing a drought. Plus, urine is a natural fertilizer, containing nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium and urea. - Small, simple yet elegant changes in the decor can make your home monsoon ready. Bright and cheerful colours like coral and yellow are perfect for the melancholy the weather leaves you with.
- Rainy season calls for light fabrics and therefore fabrics with synthetic blends are always a good idea.
- One can avoid the damp moist smell with scented candles. They are in various fragrances, so choose what suits you.
- Many of us enjoy sitting by the window and reading on a rainy day, adding wind-chimes near the window can be a good idea then. The light tingling and chiming with soft breeze will add a mystical touch to your day.
- Using vibrant coloured Chinaware can also be a good idea. Adding a few colours to the containers and dishes works fine. One can also hand paint on containers as not only does it brighten the table, but also keeps one busy during the heavy rains.

Seed bombing is the new way to reclaim green spaces

The non-violent way to reclaim the green spaces in your city with plants of your choice is fast gaining ground

Want to reclaim the city space, beautify your area and be an architect of your own surroundings? Then you're welcome to be a seed bomber - a technique that has people throwing live seeds, packed in a specially made, compressed bundle of soil. These little bombs germinate and catch soil easily during the monsoons so you don't have to spend a lot of time gardening and make your ambitious patch of green in places that are hard to reach.

Bombing the city green

In Mumbai seed bombing is fast gaining traction with plant lovers and gardening enthusiasts coming together to organise workshops during monsoon where they meet and share the various techniques to make these seed bombs. Aditi Punj, who organises these workshops at her flyover farm in Mohammed Ali Road, says that while usual gardening enthusiasts show interest, it is the kids who take to the activity in a big way. "The concept is guerrilla gardening and it is a fun way for people to be involved in making the city green. It's easy to do, and a great and tactile way for the kids to be involved."

Taking to the highways

Another seed bombing enthusiast, Shaan Lalwani who owns a nursery in the suburbs organised a similar seed bombing run along the Mumbai Pune Expressway where him along with a bunch of other enthusiasts, "I had recently read in papers that around 3 to 5 lakh trees were destroyed while making the express way. The landslides that occur during monsoons are because of this indiscriminate chopping of trees." To tackle this problem and find a remedy for the long run, Lalwani along with other enthusiasts took off in two cars with 500 bombs each and pelted the sides along the highway with these colourful bombs with sling shots. "We used seeds of plants as well as trees. The bombs were made of seeds including Neem, Peepal, Gulmohar, Badam, Umber and Bhindi. We used these as they are strong species, native to the area and ideal to be grown along the highway." DIY Making a seed bomb is a rather easy process, which involves very little in terms of materials. It is cheap. You can then go on to graduate to making the complex, fancier seed bombs.

Classic Clay Seed Ball

Invented by Japanese Masanobu Fukuoka, this is the most common one to make.

Ingredients

- Seed of your choice, or a mix (Important to use native plant seeds)
- Compost, made up of dried leaves
- Water

Method

- Mix 5 parts of clay with 1 part of compost and 1 part of seeds
- Mix a few drops of water and knead into a mix.
- Separate the clay and make tiny, clay balls. Each ball can have more than a few seeds.

Places where one can bombard with seed grenades

- 1) Plots of soft land
- 2) Dividers between roads
- 3) Building gardens
- 4) Soft paths along highways

Important

Always use seeds of native plants, as species that are not native to the environment can hurt the ecosystem of the place

Give your home a monsoon makeover

Monsoon is a great time to give your abode a practical yet vibrant makeover. Lend a refreshing change to your home decor with vibrant colors, quirky printed fabrics and accessories to add a touch of liveliness.

Experts at upholstery providers D'Decor provide some useful tips and trends to re-invent your home decor this monsoon.

- With plenty of black and grey outside, it is a definite no-no for the interiors. Whites and creams can also be avoided as they get difficult to maintain, especially if you have kids in the house.
- Monsoon calls for warm and bright colors such as ochre, coral, shades of red or neon pastels.
- Opt for slip covers in light weight, easy-care home wash fabrics like satin and poly cotton blends. Not only do they feel cozy and comfortable, but also keep away mildew and mites.
- With overcast skies, one would need whatever light that can enter the home to enhance the bright colors and reflective surfaces. Use light cotton or sheer curtains or blinds which do not have lining, to allow sufficient light to enter the room, yet providing the privacy needed.
- Indoor plants should be placed outdoor since they retain moisture and add staleness to the air. Woolens, blankets and quilts can be stored in plastics.
- Small colorful cotton rugs and mats are a surely recommended as add-ons, so that one can clean their feet before jumping on the bed. Keep the bed clean as well as dry, such that you do not need to change the linen frequently.
- Cover the beds during the day with bedcovers made from blended fabrics and sit back and enjoy the pleasant weather.

While the Congress party was in power, the BRS party was working in the opposition as a voice to question the people. Former ZP chairperson Gandra Jyoti said that they are not asking anything new from the Congress government except asking it to implement the promises made during the elections. Speaking on this occasion, Gandra Jyoti said that the Congress party came to power by making many promises before the elections, but after coming to power, it did not implement them without clarity. Gandra Jyoti said that KCR is the leader who has implemented the idea of providing investment assistance to farmers in Telangana. He reminded that during the previous BRS government, investment assistance was provided per acre through the Rythu Bandhu scheme and funds were deposited directly in the accounts of farmers. He said that the farmers were reassured by providing investment assistance of Rs. 4,000 per acre at the beginning and then Rs. 5,000 per acre. He said that the Congress party had promised to provide a large amount of investment assistance to farmers during the elections, that it would give bonuses to small farmers and that it would also provide financial assistance to farm laborers. However, he demanded that the government answer on the implementation of those promises. He criticized that although the Congress government has completed a thousand days in power, there is no clarity in the implementation of the election promises. She said that there is a doubt among the people whether the promises will be implemented during the remaining term of office. She said that the government needs sincerity, clear planning and commitment. She said that KCR has a clear vision for the development of the Telangana state. She said that he has studied the geographical conditions, water resources and agricultural needs of Telangana and formulated many programs for the development of the state. The welfare of farmers is the foundation of the welfare of the state. She said that only if the farmers' crops grow well, the society will be prosperous. If the farmers are good, the state will be good. How can the development of the state be possible if the farmers who provide us with food are put in trouble? She questioned. She said that if the farmers continue to be neglected, the people themselves will teach the government a lesson at the right time. She accused the government of spreading misinformation about the Kaleshwaram project for political gains. She said that there is a feeling among the people that internal differences and disputes are being given more priority than solving the problems of the people. She demanded that the Congress government should implement the promises made during the elections and solve the problems of the farmers. She clarified that the BRS party will continue to raise questions as an opposition for the welfare of the people. Kaleshwaram pumps should be started immediately and water should be provided to farmers. Farmers in the state are in deep distress and Bhupalpally former MLA Gandra Venkata Ramana Reddy has demanded that the government immediately start the pumps related to the Kaleshwaram project and provide irrigation water. Speaking at a farmers' conference organized on farmers' problems, former MLA Gandra said that the government is issuing warnings to farmers to be more vigilant in the face of unfavorable natural conditions. However, he said that the current government has completely failed to solve the problems of farmers. He said that the first Chief Minister of Telangana, KCR, built the Kaleshwaram project with a long-sighted vision and diverted water through Kaleshwaram and led Telangana, which was once known as a drought-prone area, on the path of development in the agricultural sector. He said that while Punjab, Haryana, East and West Godavari districts were once famous for rice cultivation, the credit for ensuring that rice crops were grown extensively in Telangana also goes to KCR. Recalling the occasion when he attended the inaugural ceremony of the Kaleshwaram project, he said that the construction of the project gave him more confidence in the future of Telangana. He said that although many political parties, leaders and activists have been talking about using Godavari waters for

ous. He said that a farmer is a person who provides food not only to himself but also to the society. He demanded that the government think about why such a farmer is in a state of despair and anxiety today. He said that farmers will benefit by filling local tanks and tanks and reservoirs. He said that during the previous BRS government, farmers were provided 24-hour quality electricity at the time of need, but now electricity is being supplied only at officially fixed times, and farmers are expressing their grievances that there are frequent outages. Farmers should be provided with uninterrupted 24-hour electricity. Electricity problems should be resolved immediately. He warned that if the government continues to neglect farmers, a large-scale struggle will be launched against it. He demanded that the government properly manage the irrigation projects built for the welfare of farmers, regardless of politics. He urged the farmers to provide water, electricity and fertilizers on time and protect agriculture. He made it clear that the state will be good only if the farmers are good and the BRS party will continuously fight for the welfare of the farmers. Later, he held a road dharna from the Regonda mandal center to the electricity substation, holding a 420-foot flexi display.

many decades, KCR is the leader who brought it into action. He criticized that the damage to a single pillar at Medigadda was used as an excuse and spread bad publicity about the entire Kaleshwaram project. He alleged that the government, which should have a comprehensive understanding of the design of the Kaleshwaram project, the functioning of the pump houses, and the water transportation system, has neglected the management of the project for the last three years. He said that if the water transportation system from Medigadda to Annaram, Sundilla, and Yellampally is properly utilized, the irrigation and drinking water needs of many areas can be met. He said that the rainfall situation in the state is worrying. Even though clouds appear, it is not raining as expected, which is a risk of drought. He alleged that a motor in the Shyampet pump house has burnt down and there is no way to repair it even after months. He criticized the government for failing to fully maintain the pump systems related to Devadula and Kaleshwaram projects. He said that if water is pumped properly through the projects, there will be no shortage of water for the irrigated lands in the joint Warangal district. He said that it is not right to neglect the management of the projects, citing technical problems, repairs of transformers and lack of funds as reasons. He said that al-start the Kaleshwaram pumps and provide irrigation water to the farmers.
